Citusbille Morning. Berald. · Point:

Sometime this week lan effort will be made in the House of Representatives to suspend the rules for the purpose of bringing up a resolution of inquiry into what legislation is necessary for the protection of James W. Smith, a colored cadet at the West Point Academy. Mr. David Clark, ber of Congress from Virginia, concerning Smith, in which he says: I desire to give you a few facts about Cadet Smith. Soon after the close of the war, I sent a teacher to Columbia, ¿South Carolina. In January, 1867, I visited her school. My attention was called to the boy Smith, then fifteen years old. My teacher said he was a remarkable scholar, and possessed an excellent character. The boy was most auxious for an education, and wished me to take him North and educate him. The appeal was so earnest that I decided to do so. He entered our district school, containing 1100 pupils, in the second class. In three weeks he entered trimmed with ruchings of the material. the first class, and at the close of the term The neck was cut low and round, th the first class, and at the close of the term he was the best scholar in the first class, received a recommendation from the principal to enter the High School, which he did in the full. At the close of ithe term he was the first in his class. The second which the did not be anteved the third class, and came with folds of white tulle, headed with folds of the dress material. An over pear he entered the third class, and came out "No. 1," besides estudying German with a professor in Trinity College. The third year he took both second and first classes, and, although he had double work came rout with the had best and was assigned a rose from the third year he took both second and tea rosebuda; the waist was double work came rout with the decelette corsage double work as a second with the decelette corsage double work and the decelette corsage double with the decelette corsage double with the decelette corsage double with the decelette corsage double w best, and was assigned a most important he is the best subclar he aver saw. The sons and daughters of our best families are educated at this school. Smith was a member, of my household, and was the sage was cut decelete, and black lace was member, of my household, and was the most truthful and correct boy in all his habits and deportment that L ever saw. What ball-playing, skating, and other amusements are to others, books and study were to him. On the let of May I sent him to Howard University, intending to educate him there. During the month Judge Hoge, Representative of the Third Congress District of South Carolina, gave him an appointment to West Point. He desired to get General Howard's approval of the plan. I differed, but yielded. He went, but God only knows how-much he suffered from the day he trod that ground until his last court-martial. I have been there three times to look after him. He would have left in July had it not been for me. I had an interview with President Grant when here, on the 2d and 3d of July last. He said, "Don't take him away; the battle might as well be fought now as a permitted to stay."

> An affray occurred at Brady's Bend of Saturday afternoon which resulted in the death of Benjumin Watters, a colored barber. A foot race was announced to take place there on Saturday, and a number of the "fahoy" from Parker's Landing came down to witness it. The race was delayed for some time, and during the interval several fights occurred during one of which Oswald, a "rough" from Parker's Landing, drew a revolver and fired several shots into the crowd. One of the shots med through the door of the barber shop where Watters was at work, and struck him in the breast, causing a wound from the effects of which he died on Sunday. Oswald was promptly arrested and committed to jail for a hearing.

Charter Amendments--- Letter from Judge Chase. itors Morning Herald:

In your issue of the 23d inst., I noticed some criticisms upon a few charter amendments submitted to the citizens' meeting, assembled for the purpose of considering any suggestions offered relative to amending the city charter. No idea was entertained that the Council would so strenuously oppose the people in preparing such amendments as would have for its aim the public good, while it protected the people against the oppressive power of the Common Council. While in attendance at the meeting, the question was propounded to me equarely, whether the Conneil had au-
